DEALING WITH HOLIDAY STRESS?

The Military and Family Readiness Center Provides Free Face-to-Face Counseling

Sometimes strength means asking for help. Military OneSource and the Military and Family Life Counseling Program offer free, confidential, face-to-face non-medical counseling to support you with military and family life challenges like preparing for and handling a move or nurturing a relationship with a deployed spouse during the holidays.

In-person, free counseling sessions are available to active-duty, National Guard and reserve members of any activation status, their immediate family members and survivors. All counselors have a master's or doctoral degree in a mental health field and a license to practice independently.

Are face-to-face sessions confidential?

- Information disclosed during a non-medical counseling session is confidential.
- It will not impact your career or your spouse's career in any way.
- The only exceptions to confidentiality are legal and military requirements to report child abuse, spouse abuse, elder abuse, threats of harm to self or others, and any present or future illegal activity.
- Eligible family members or a legal guardian of a service member's dependents can use non-medical counseling sessions without the service member's knowledge.

For more information contact the Military & Family Readiness Office (803) 895-1253 or visit us at 524 Stuart Avenue.

Are children and youth eligible for face-to-face counseling?

- Military OneSource offers face-to-face non-medical counseling for children and youth ages 6 to 17.
- The service includes help with issues such as family relationships, school issues, adjustment to deployment or separation, and grief and loss.
- A parent must attend each session for military children ages 6 to 12, but only the first session for youths ages 13 to 17.
- Children younger than age 18 are eligible for counseling with a child and youth behavioral military and family life counselor with parental consent.
- All military and family life counseling with children occurs within line of sight of another adult.
