DEPARTMENT OF THE AIR FORCE

FAMILY CHILD CARE

PROVIDER MADELINE HAWES OF THE YEAR

For many military families, finding safe, reliable, and nurturing care for their children is one of the most important – and challenging – parts of military life. For Family Child Care (FCC) provider Madeline Hawes, it's more than a job. It's a calling.

Madeline, originally from Wisconsin, began her journey as an FCC provider in 2019. "I wanted to stay home with my children," she shared, reflecting on what initially drew her to the role. Now, a mother of two, she has turned her home into a welcoming space for military families who need the peace of mind that their children are safe and cared for.

That peace of mind, she explains, is where she feels she makes the biggest difference. "I feel like I provide comfort to families knowing that their children are safe, happy, and well cared for, and I feel like it makes their job easier knowing that their children are with someone they can trust."

Her FCC journey has taken her to multiple bases across the country, even as far as Alaska—where one of her most memorable moments occurred. "We were eating breakfast and heard some commotion outside. There was a moose taking apart the swing set! The kids got to watch while the moose dismantled their playground for the rest of the year," she laughed.

Now based in South Carolina, Madeline's hard work and dedication have been recognized in a big way. She was recently named FCC Provider of the Year, an honor that, for her, carries deep meaning. "It makes me feel like everything I've done, and everything I'm going to continue to do, has made an impact—not only on the children, but on their families, our coordinator, and all of the leadership."

For those who may be considering becoming an FCC provider, Madeline offers heartfelt encouragement:

"I'd say that even though the job is tasking, it is one of the most rewarding jobs as the children and parents take a special place in your heart. You almost get your own tiny village who uplifts and supports you, and they trust you with their most valuable possession—their children. That's a special person to be!"

With a warm heart, a welcoming home, and a deep commitment to the military community, Madeline Hawes embodies what it means to provide care that truly makes a difference. Looking to become an FCC provider? Call 803.895.1864
